GET HARVARD DOPE IN VIRGINIA GAME PLAYED SATURDAY

First Opportunity of Doping Strength of Crimson Will be Given Tomorrow.—Wisconsin vs. Purdue.

(By George R. Holmes.)

New York, Oct. 15.—The schedule makers for 1915 were kind to the dopers. Through a kindly kink in the 1915 playing chart, it will be possible tomorrow night to form an idea of how Yale and Harvard compare for their annual gridiron tussle. The big Crimson eleven gets the acid test when it lines up against the University of Virginia team, which two weeks ago, sprung the surprise of the present season by defeating Yale on her own field, 10 to 0. By the comparative score route, the football world should have some food for thought after tomorrow's battle at Cambridge. It isn't often that a chance to get a line on the big fellows comes so early in the season.

About all that can be said about the game is that Percy Haughton has a battle on his hands that is many degrees removed from a tea party. In Portland, Virginia probably has as good a kicker as there is in the game this year, and he defeated Yale practically single-handed. Virginia's victory wasn't a fluke—it was earned, a fact of which Haughton is probably fully aware. That he will throw his full strength into the breach goes without saying.

Virginia has a lot to fight for. Victories over Yale and Harvard—the peers of the collegiate kingdom—in a single year would raise the southern school to an enviable position in the athletic world.

Yale meets Springfield tomorrow. The Massachusetts institution generally has a team of huskies, but the Blue should win in rather easy style. Since the Virginia defeat, Frank Hinkley has given the Eli eleven one of the biggest shakings up in Yale's football history, and the result of the jostling will be watched with much concern by Yale partisans.

Princeton should run up an overwhelming score against Lafayette. The Pennsylvania boys aren't so strong this year as in other years, and should be meat for the Tigers.

ALEXANDER HAS HAD INTERESTING CAREER

Grover C. Alexander.

Grover Cleveland Alexander, who is called by most fans, "the whole Philadelphia team," was born in St. Paul, Nebraska, Feb. 26, 1897. His parents were settlers in Nebraska when the Indians were running wild and Alex was born in a hut miles away from anywhere. Since he started out to conquer the earth six years ago he has had an interesting career.

MORRIS MILLER

This winter will see more trading among the Giants, Cubs, Pirates, Cardinals, and Cincinnati than ever before. Already several deals have been discussed among the various managers, but little will be done until the National League meeting in December. The Phillies, Braves, and Dodgers will do comparatively little in the trading line, although the two last named would give some players if they could obtain fair pitching prospects.

When the Cardinals and Giants open the 1916 season they will show more changes than any of the other teams. Outside of Ames and Meadows, it is known that Huggins is not satisfied with his regular pitching staff in the season just closed. Louline, a recruit, showed fairly well, and both he and Boardman, who also pitched a few good innings now and then, will be taken to the training camp. Hall, Steele, and Williams will be others to go to camp. Griner, Sallee, Robinson, Perdue, and Nibhaus probably will go to other camps if they can be disposed of. Huggins may give Bill Dook another chance.

Robinson, obtained from Pittsburgh in the celebrated trade of two winters ago, has proven a bit of a disappointment. He was a promising youngster, but he never fulfilled the promise. A change of scenery might do him good and develop him into a real star. The same goes for Griner, who for three years has been an "in and out" on the Cardinal team. None of these pitchers could do much worse on another team than they did during the last season.

Dolan and Hyatt will go, if any one will take them, according to all indications. With a competent outfield this season, the Cardinals would have come close to winning the pennant. At least twenty games were lost to St. Louis through poor fielding by Long, Hyatt, and Dolan. Wilson did not help his holding. Another probable will go, with Hornsby, a mere kid, showing so well, and with Corban, a finished shortstop, due next spring. Miller at first, Bertel Hornsby at second, Corban at short, and Beck at third would appear to be the Cards' 1916 infield. Snyder and Gonzalez probably will constitute the catching staff with a couple of recruit backstops to report.

McGraw contemplates wholesale changes in his team. He hasn't announced his scheme yet, but it is known that he is disgusted with the work of practically every man on his club. While Peritt has been a bit of a disappointment, his contract, which calls for $9,000 a year for two years, will stand in the way of any other club taking him.

Mathewson is about through and probably will be used next year as a rescue pitcher and to coach the young pitchers McGraw will try out. Tesreau and Stroud appear better than any other New York twirlers around the last season. Besides these two, Doyle, Markle, Fletcher, and Robertson probably will be retained as the nucleus of the new team McGraw could build up. It is a sort of open secret that Doolin and Myers are slated for dismissal as McGraw is not satisfied with either.

Whenever the new manager of the Pittsburgh Pirates takes charge he is expected to make numerous changes, while it is almost certain that some of the Cub regulars will be missing from the lineup next spring.

The difficulty in the way of these trades is going to be felt, as they affect the players still under contract for next year or the year after. In several cases they will draw exorbitant salaries, and this will figure largely in the trades. As for sending some of these back to the minors, the only way would be for the team disposing of them to pay part of their salaries while the minor teams pay a reasonable portion of them.

STRANGE MAN BREAKS INTO SCHOOL TEACHER'S ROOM

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE]
Whitewater, Oct. 15.—Miss Myrtle Brockmeier, who is teaching at Salem, Wis., was attacked by a man who broke into her room at one o'clock in the morning. Miss Brockmeier fought the intruder, but he was too strong for her and he escaped. She is now in the hospital.

The Normal football team goes to Watertown Saturday for a game with Watertown. The team has been practicing for the game and the team going into the game Saturday will be in much better condition than when they last played.

John Gibbs was a visitor in Janesville Thursday.

Mr. Arthur Burkhardt of Milwaukee is here on a week's vacation at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. N. Saver. Mrs. Saver entertained a small company of friends last evening in honor of their guest, and also Mr. Saver's birthday.

Mrs. Mary Dancy and Mrs. Frank Hayes were guests yesterday at the home of the former's brother, Geo. Winch.

Mrs. Geo. Winch entertained a company of little people yesterday afternoon in honor of her little daughter, Grace's eighth birthday.

Mrs. Cory Hull and Miss Hattie Warner are visiting Mrs. Will Pike at Leona Mills.

The regular meeting of the week was held last evening at the Congregational church at 7:30. It was the first meeting since the organization of the church and society. The meeting was largely attended. Reports were given from the different societies in the church, and a parting report of the canvassers, who were out on Sunday afternoon. The meeting was preceded by a supper which was also largely attended.

TRINKETS ARE MADE ON THE FIRING LINE

Soldiers Make Rings From "Raw Materials" Obtained in the Fighting Lines.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE]

Eastern France, Oct. 16.—If you need a fad and would like to become a "collector" here is a free suggestion: Start a collection of trinkets made by French troopers on the firing line.

Starting with finger-rings in the spring, there are a few things the warriors are not making between bayonet charges and dodging big shells. Aluminum, brass, copper and nickel in the German shells hurled at the French usually are the "raw materials" for the trinkets.

The most popular curio is the aluminum ring. Scarcely a soldier is without at least one. These are made by cutting off a cross-section of the aluminum fuse-tubing inside German shells and whittling or filing it to desired design. These are numerous and some are of beautiful workmanship, engraved with professional skill. Some of the soldiers are, of course, jewelers.

A popular design is the signet with a crown cut from the Prussian Guard's brass button, inset. These rings are much sought.

Others are serpents wearing the spiked German helmet, the French bayonet charges and dodging big shells, coins, buttons, insignia, buckles, belts, hand grenades, also are used. The most popular curio is the aluminum ring. Scarcely a soldier is without at least one. These are made by cutting off a cross-section of the aluminum fuse-tubing inside German shells and whittling or filing it to desired design. These are numerous and some are of beautiful workmanship, engraved with professional skill. Some of the soldiers are, of course, jewelers.

Cartridges with the bases joined, holding a pencil in one end and a pen in the other and pen-knives made simply of American "special" barbed wire cut from entanglements are quite as fair, as fashion writers at home say.

One of the nicest articles is a breakfast gong made of the brass bases of shells of large calibre. Suspended on a wooden cord, like bells, and tapped, they give forth a very pleasant tone. Such fobs are made of leather from German officers' belts with a gold-plated button for fob or a fob made of bronze, brass, nickel or aluminum, any desired shape.

Aeroplane are made of German cartridge-clips with pennants for wheels. Beer mugs in miniature are made of cartridge shells, and a dandy paperweight is fashioned of shell-fuses or hand grenades with a grape-laden vine growing out of the orifice. The vines are made of telephone wires, the grapes from shrapnel bullets.

From the mud of the trenches soldier-sculptors are making all sorts of statues, humorous and serious. The busts of Joffre and Poincaré; miniature Venuses and Mercuries; and comic Crown-princes and Kaisers are favorites.

Dainty necks, shovels, rifles, canon, and the like are made of brass or other metal. They are polished and finished to a point where any jeweler might handle them with pride.

There is no limit to these "Made in the Trenches" articles. The odds vary much as do the objects. Some of the men have a pocket-knife. Most, however, have managed to get hold of at least a file and a piece of emery cloth.

Sometimes, instead of merely filing a section of aluminum, the metal is molded after melting. The original things were made of this. A raw potato was cut in half and a mold of the desired object made. Then the two halves were put together and the molten metal poured into the strange mold through an aperture. From this crude beginning, some of the men have developed complicated arrangements whereby two or three metals are combined to form all sorts of patterns, one upon another.

The soldier isn't trying to make money with these things. It is rarely he will part with the proofs of his ingenuity. He makes them in his leisure time between battles or watching at loopholes on the lips of the trenches.

The work occupies his mind and the product usually finds its way to wife, sweetheart, mother, father or children. Much devotion, almost life-blood, goes into the trinket, for not infrequently its manufacture is the last act of the soldier before he goes to death.

Spilled His Thoughts.
Little Billie was lying quietly, with eyes wide open, but apparently seeing nothing. After a while his mother, asked, "Dreaming, Billie?" "No, dreaming, thinking," replied Billie impatiently, "and when anybody speaks to me it cuts the think right in two and I have to begin all over again."

PRESS CENSORSHIP.

Whatever is to be said for or against a vigorous press censorship in time of war, there can be no doubt as to the desirability of the press itself, even where this censorship is exercised most mildly, says the Christian Science Monitor. "Where it is really drastic, as in France, protest is everywhere. The objections to it, whether mild or drastic, are in all cases much the same. The freedom of the press, especially in those countries where this freedom has been won after a great struggle, is guarded with a jealousy only equaled by that exercised over the right of free speech. Basically the determination to guard this right, at all costs, is the recognition of the necessity for guarding the guardian." The Paris Temps, in an article vigorously supporting the petition, recently issued by the Pigeon against the censorship, put this aspect of the question quite forcibly. Since the Chambers, the Temps declared, have been able to insure their right of control over the action of the government, it is not just that public opinion, through the press should be able to insure the same for itself? The liberty of the press, it adds, is equally necessary with the liberty of the courts of justice.

In a question so open to debate, and so openly debated, there is much call for caution in offering comment. It is safe, however, to assume that here, as in so much else, the nearest approximation lies in a just middle course, somewhere between the extravagant flights of the "trust" people's cry, put forth so earnestly in a certain notorious section of the British press, and the drastic measures lately adopted in France, where, as claimed by the Temps, the censor's power is being used to suppress all political comment and all criticism of the action of the government or parliament. The war, a certain famous British statesman remarked caustically, when an appeal was made to him to "just the people," is not being waged for the purpose of supplying halfpenny newspapers with reading matter; and there is a very pungent truth in the remark.

"Le Temps shows the other extreme to the ideal thus put aside. By an abusive extension of the law, the text of which is perhaps a little vague, it says, the government has followed the practice of suppressing all articles or reports which have incurred its displeasure. The press is allowed, it is true, to praise, even without discrimination, but it must abstain from criticism, warning, foresight, or counsel of any kind. Between the condition involved in the 'trust' people's policy, a policy which really obtained in Great Britain during the South African war, and the extremes mentioned by Le Temps, there is a great space for an almost unlimited number of prudent adjustments."

They Ain't None. He kissed her in the hall, "You mustn't, Joe," she cried, "you know." They say that time will tell. In vain, Sisyphus, Smith had searched the world for a soul mate, a woman unlike all others, a woman with an individual mind and soul.

But in all the beautiful, the homely, the in-between, the noble spirit of individuality was lacking. At long and at last, Sisyphus hid him to see, a man wiser than the wisest, to whom he told his tale. "In the natural history museums," said the seer, "there reposes the mummy of Kitchykid, who three thousand years ago was the fairest damsel in all Egypt. Surely she, so many centuries removed from the banal young women of today, so fair and famous, would meet your requirements were she only alive. And harken while I impart to you the mystic words that will awaken her, beautiful and good."

Sisyphus rushed madly to the dummy department in the museums and waved his arms thrice above the case in which reposed the wondrous Kitchykid.

"Arrawanna spearpoint, gish!" he cried, and lo, the crumbling garments in which Kitchykid had lain imprisoned for so many ages fell from her, and she sat up, dazling to behold, and blinking in wonderment. "My soul mate!" cried Sisyphus. "My Kitchykid different from all women in the world!" "Is there any powder on my nose?" murmured Kitchykid.

NEW BLOOD

One result of the MILK and REST TREATMENT is the production of an abundance of good blood, rich in red blood corpuscles and hemoglobin—the principal element of blood.

It is a well established fact that through the blood only can any chronic disease or ailment be cured.

None of the usual methods of heart stimulation, such as alcohol or other drugs, massage, inhalations of oxygen, solutions injected into the veins, or transfusion of blood, can equal the results of the MILK DIET TREATMENT in effect in permanency, in total lack of danger.

BY MISS DALE LONARD

When John Sees How Worn Molly Is, He Is Moved to a Little Sympathy.

Molly Sutherland lay listening for her husband's step, trying to face the situation that confronted her: trying to calm herself, for she realized that her relations with her husband had reached a stage that called for a change. She would have to get away by herself to think things out and get command of herself, but the poor woman was not that lucky. The tiny cottage offered no retreat. "Besides," she thought, "I must not let him know that I saw him. I saw him through the stenographer, at least not until I have decided what I will say to him."

She could have a degree of seclusion by feigning sleep, and this she decided to do. She had not long to wait before she heard the key turn in the door and her heart beat so furiously that she was afraid he would hear it when he came into the room and turned on the light. Though she lay with her face to the wall she could follow his every movement about the room, so intently was she listening. She longed to turn over and see if the happy smile she had seen on his face as he passed under the street light looking down at his companion was still there. After the light was out she fairly held her breath, to listen for his regular breathing, that she might feel alone. She had not long to wait.

When she was certain that he slept she opened her eyes upon the congenial darkness that had begun to rain again. In all the world there seemed to be just herself and darkness and rain.

"I wanted to be alone to think, thought," she surely have my wish."

could touch my husband if I put out my hand, but between us is a great gulf fixed—I cannot go to him and he will not come to me. I may call as loudly as I will, but he never hears. I am nothing to him."

She began to cry softly, carefully suppressing every sob or motion that she might not be alone to think. "I wanted to be alone to think," she now I am utterly unable to decide what to do." The nervous tension following on the utter physical weariness broke down all bars of restraint, and she gave way to a passion of weeping. It was hours before she could quiet herself enough to go to sleep, and she only did so after she had decided to stay in bed in the morning and let John get his own breakfast that she might cover the traces of her tears before he saw her in the long light.

"I will say nothing about what I saw. Women can't compel love, and I never gained anything by making scenes. What I discovered will remain a secret for the present, anyway."

This resolve to keep silence had a quieting effect upon her and she fell asleep. In the early dawn, when the alarm went off, "I am afraid I will have to get up this morning," she asked John sitting up in bed.

"Just fagged, I guess. That washing was too much for me, I suppose," Molly lay with her face to the wall.

"Shall I call a doctor?" asked John, scrambling out of bed.

"No, don't wake little Jack. If I can get a little more sleep I may be able to get up; it's only a nervous headache."

"I'm sorry you are sick. You must not do any more washing. We must manage some other way. His tone was almost stern. Can't I do any thing for you?" he asked before he left the house. Molly felt a great easing of the ache in her heart, and fell asleep.

Household Hints

Uncooked CANDIES.

Fudge—Take confectioner's sugar the kind that is free from lumps—and add cocoa to suit taste; then add either fresh or condensed cream—just enough so that same mixed making as stiff as possible. Put in a little vanilla to flavor it. Use any kind of nuts or cocoanut. Put on paraffin paper and lastly dip spoon in cream and smooth the top of candy with the back of same. Let it set for a short time. This can be made in one-quarter of the time that it takes to make other fudge, and it is delicious.

CANNING AND PRESERVING.

Grapes to Pickle—Cut grapes off before they are ripe, taking care not to bruise them. Boil one gallon vinegar with one ounce peppercorns, two citrons lemon and two ounces ginger. When cold pour over grapes, cover, let stand for three days, then boil vinegar again. Pour in when cold the top of candy with the back of same. Put in air-tight cans.

Tomatoes for Soup—Put enough salt in water to float an egg; boil the water and let stand to get cold. Then put in eight apples, one-half pound lemon and orange peel, one-half cup sugar and two cups of vinegar. When cold pour over them and put away. Do not salt your soup till after tomatoes are put in, then salt to taste.

MINCED MEATS.

With Meat—One pound of raisins, one pound currants, one pound brown sugar, eight apples, one-half pound lemon and orange peel, one-half cup sugar and two cups of vinegar. When cold pour over them and put away. Do not salt your soup till after tomatoes are put in, then salt to taste.

THE TABLE.

Clam Chowder—Twenty clams chopped fine, twelve boiled potatoes, one large onion, one slice fat salt pork, one chopped fine and thoroughly mixed. Strain liquor of clams, pour over all, add four crackers rolled fine. Season to suit taste with salt and pepper. Simmer over slow fire two hours. Serve hot with bread and butter; a very nourishing and appetizing meal.

Quick Company Dessert—Dice sweet apples, sprinkle with sugar and nutmeg. Served with whipped cream. Delicious.

Whipped Cream Substitute—Beat whites of two eggs very stiff; slice thin one banana, add to eggs and beat until thoroughly dissolved. Sweeten to taste with powdered sugar. The richness of color and delicious taste makes this the equal of rather than a substitute for whipped cream and has found favor wherever it went.

Doughnuts—One egg, two three cups flour of sugar, one cupful sweet milk, butter size of an egg, pinch of salt, two heaping teaspoons baking powder, flour to roll.

Russian Dressing—One large cooked and sliced beet, small onion, half dozen olives, quarter pound Roquefort cheese. Run through fine chopper and mix with one cup thin mayonnaise; delicious.

WOMEN TAKE STEPS FOR WORLD PEACE IN A CONFERENCE

Warring Europe Authorized Leading Women of World to Say that a Peace Conference is Wanted.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE)

New York, Oct. 15.—Warring Europe has authorized the leading women of the world to say that it wants a Peace Conference of Neutral Nations if it is led by the United States. Three neutral nations have agreed. Two are considering. The United States has not decided.

The official of every nation now at war authorized this statement by the International Congress of Women at The Hague, after an authorized delegate of the congress conferred with him.

These facts are contained in a statement issued here today by The International Committee of Women for Permanent Peace, with a copy of The Hague Women's Congress Manifesto to the governments of Europe and the President of the United States, attached.

In their joint report the leading members of these two delegations unite in stating that the evidence and assurances given them have convinced them that the belligerents would not consider such a conference as friendly, and that the neutrals would be unwilling to act, if first assured of American co-operation.

The delegates were not at liberty to give opinion or nationality of the foreign officers specifically quoted, but in several instances they quote verbatim. My country would not find any obstacle in the way of its participation," said the Minister of an opposing nation. "What are the neutrals waiting for?" said a third, whose name it is stated ranks high in her own country, but all over the world.

The envoys were received by the following, among others: Prime Minister Asquith and Foreign Minister Sir Edward Grey, in London.

Reichskanzler Von Bethmann-Hollweg, and Foreign Minister Von Jagow, in Berlin.

Prime Minister Stuerckh, Foreign Minister Puriin, in Vienna; Prime Minister Tisza, in Budapest.

Prime Minister Salandra and Foreign Minister Sonnino, in Rome.

Prime Minister Viviani and Foreign Minister Declasse, in Paris.

Foreign Minister d'Avignon, in Havre.

Foreign Minister Sazonoff, in Petrograd.

And by the following representatives of neutral governments: Minister of Foreign Affairs, in London.

Prime Minister Zable and Foreign Minister Scavenius, in Copenhagen.

King Haakon, Prime Minister Knudsen, Foreign Minister Thlen, and Messrs. Loveland, Aarstad, Castberg and Jahren, the four presidents of the Storthing in Christiania.

Foreign Minister Wallenberg, in Stockholm.

President Motta and Foreign Minister Hoffman, in Bern.

King Haakon, Prime Minister Knudsen, Foreign Minister Thlen, and Messrs. Loveland, Aarstad, Castberg and Jahren, the four presidents of the Storthing in Christiania.

The International Congress of Women, which met at The Hague last April, appointed two groups of envoys, one to the belligerent governments, and to Holland and Switzerland; the other to Russia and the Scandinavian countries. The reports of these envoys form the basis for the announcement issued today here and in Amsterdam.

The manifesto is signed by Dr. J. Collins, of England; Miss Christy Macmillan, of Great Britain; Mrs. Roska Schwimmer, of Austria-Hungary; Prof. Emily Greene Balch, of Wellesley College, and Miss Jane Addams, of Hull House, Chicago. Mrs. Addams is president of the international committee; Miss Macmillan, secretary; Dr. Jacobs and Mme. Schwimmer, vice-presidents.

One of the envoys says in part: "We heard much the same words spoken in Downing street as those spoken in Wilhelmstrasse, in Vienna."

"Set a Thief."

"Set a thief to catch a thief," is an old and well-proven proverb, but I sometimes wonder if we realize to the full its meaning and possibilities. A friend of mine has a neighbor who is a kind-hearted person, but who possesses of a weakness for gossip. She has a watchful eye which never misses any of the doings of the neighborhood, a busy mind which never forgets them and a tongue which is ever ready to pass them on.

The other day my neighbor's daughter wanted to do a certain thing which, while not in any sense wrong, was unconventional and open to misinterpretation. "I wouldn't mind at all," said her mother, "if I didn't know that Mrs. So-and-so would get hold of it and talk it over with everyone in the neighborhood. Perhaps, if you're careful you can keep her from knowing anything about it."

A Better Way to Muzzle Her. "I wouldn't mind at all," said her mother, "if I didn't know that Mrs. So-and-so would get hold of it and talk it over with everyone in the neighborhood. Perhaps, if you're careful you can keep her from knowing anything about it."

She went straight to the lady in question and in the course of a little chat mentioned what she wanted to do. "Of course you and I know it's perfectly all right," she said. "But some people are so quick to think evil."

"My dear," said the other woman, "I shouldn't let that bother you a particle. You know you're doing nothing wrong and that's all there is to it. If I hear any gossip, I'll certainly put an end to it."

And she did—most effectively. Set a character thief to catch a character thief, you see.

Uplifting the Bad Boy's Energy. One day not long ago, I had carried my suit-case to the foot of the street, when I remembered a neglected duty. I didn't want to carry the suit-case back with me and as that victim of the thief, I didn't want to leave it. Then I saw a group of the aforesaid youngsters sitting on a fence, and had a thought.

"You're going to be here for a few minutes?" I asked them.

"Want to keep an eye on this and see that no one touches it?"

"Sure they would. And sure they did, even to the unexpectedly strenuous extent of punishing another youngster who happened along and started to investigate."

Set the energy that produces mischief to keep mischief in order, you see.

There's plenty of honesty in the thief and tenderness in the gossip and respect for property in the mischief maker, in short, good in everything and everybody if we will only appeal to it in the right way and range it against the very forces by which it has been overruled and concealed.

CONB SAGE TEA IN HAIR TO DARKEN IT

Grandma Kept Her Locks Dark, Glossy, Thick With a Mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur.

The old-time mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur for darkening gray, streaked and faded hair is the grandmother's treatment, and folks are again using it to keep their hair a good, even color, which is quite sensible, as we are living in an age when a youthful appearance is of the greatest advantage.

Nowadays, though, we don't have the troublesome task of gathering the sage and the musky mixing at home. All drug stores sell the ready-to-use product called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound" for about 50 cents a bottle. It is very popular because nobody can discover it has been applied. Simply moisten your comb or a soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, but what delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur is that, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also produces that soft lustre and appearance of abundance which is so attractive; besides, prevents dandruff, itching scalp and falling hair.

BREAKING IT GENTLY. Maid Thieves got into a house in the street last night and stole the silver.

Mistress—Isn't that dreadful! Whose house was it?

Maid—It was number seven.

Mistress—Why is it our house?

Maid—Yes, ma'am, but I didn't want to frighten you.

Carnation Milk

The convenient, safe milk supply

The convenience of Carnation Milk will appeal to you as much as its wholesomeness, economy and rich flavor. Keep plenty on hand; open it as required—

—you always have a known safe milk supply.

Carnation Milk is all you require for cooking and table use. It is pure, cow's milk, evaporated to the consistency of cream—hermetically sealed and sterilized. Nothing is added—nothing removed but water. Pure and sweet when opened—wherever and whenever that may be.

Always have several cans on hand. Order supply from your grocer—"The Carnation Milkman"—and use as you need it—without waste or worry for fear of spoiling. Recipe booklet on request.

Pacific Coast Condensed Milk Co. SEATTLE, U.S.A.

Foundation for Cream Soups

Mix thoroughly 2 cups Carnation Milk with 2 cups of water, reserving 1 cup of milk to mix with the flour. Scald milk and water, then add the flour, and stir until smooth. Return to fire in double boiler, add 1/2 cup of sugar and 1/2 cup of salt, and cook until it thickens. This cream soup foundation may be thinned with any quantity of water, or used as a base for soups, stews, and different ingredients as desired.

Scarlet Fever.

Scarlet fever is a different name for the same disease—and the disease is always contagious, no matter what label we apply to it. Not only is it contagious, but from the secretions. And as long as there is any sort of discharge, as from a running ear, the scarlet fever contagion, be it days or weeks after the rash has disappeared. Nursing babies are almost immune. Adults are often susceptible.

The disease is somewhat less fatal than measles, but not so fatal as whooping cough.

The specific germ is still unidentified—but it is believed to be a form of streptococcus, one of the most virulent germs in surgical cases.

The first symptoms appear in from twenty-four hours to a week after exposure, usually two or three days.

A Simple Way To Remove Dandruff

There is one sure way that has never failed to remove dandruff at once, and that is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, common liquid arvon from any drug store (this is all you need), apply it at night when retiring, use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

The scalp will stop itching and digging, the hair will stop falling out, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

The onset is rather sudden—chill or, in young children, a convulsion being common. Vomiting is suspicious. Fever appears, accompanied with a sore throat, but no cough as in measles. The face looks flushed. The tongue is turned and, after a day or two, shows peculiar red papillae, the "strawberry tongue."

After a few days (two or three) the rash appears in the form of a general bluish or purplish red, first on neck and chest. The rash looks less blotchy, less measly than measles. It lasts seven or eight days, and is followed by peeling of the skin. The peeling or desquamation serves to identify the disease in the medical eye weeks after the rash has gone.

There is usually a follicular on-slititis with the rash. In measles instead of sore throat the child has coryza ("head cold") and cough.

Streptococcus complications, such as endocarditis, acute valvular inflammation of the heart, and acute joint inflammation, and acute middle ear inflammation (gathering in the inner ear) are apt to occur.

The kidneys injured by the toxins or poisons of the scarlet fever streptococcus, are apt to become inflamed—either acute or chronic nephritis (Bright's disease).

Because of these complications the physician must watch the patient throughout, long after the fever and rash have disappeared.

Let fever have passed when a scorching patient was kept cooped up in an over-heated room. Nowadays fresh air is allowed in plenty, but the child is kept comfortably dressed at all times. Kidneys, like other organs, do better work on fresh air. Certainly the middle ear infection is less liable to occur when the child receives plenty of cool air.

"I'm so glad I got here ahead of her! I'll tell you what I heard about her! You'd never guess it in a thousand years!"

"What the hell does you want her?"

"I reckon we won't hardly agree on no proposition for despoiling my people, Mr. Malcolm."

"Then we can disagree, when the time comes," remarked the other man with a trace of tartness in his voice.

"Then ye don't aim to develop us just now?"

Malcolm shook his head, the glow of his pipe bowl for a moment lighting up a face upon which lingered an amused smile.

"Not this time. Another time, perhaps."

"All right, then," Havey's voice carried a very masked and courteous but very unmistakable warning. "Whenever ye get good an' ready—we'll argue that."

He bowed to the girl and turned into the path which led down to the gate.

CHAPTER XVII.

It was one of those nights under whose brooding wings vague things and influences are astray and in the making. Dawn had gone back for a few days to her brother's lonely cabin on a hillside to see his house in order and to do his simple mending. Perhaps in her own heart there was an other reason—an unconfessed unwillingness to stay at the bungalow while she must feel so far away from Juanita and see Roger Malcolm seemingly so near.

In her heart vague things were stirring, too, and in another heart. The fact that she had not been allowed to see young Milt McBrier had given him an augmented importance which had kept the boy in her mind despite her denunciations. Once she had met him on the road and he had stopped her to say: "Dawn, do ye know why I don't come over there no more?"

The girl had only nodded and the boy went on:

"Well, some day when ye're at Jeb's cabin I'm a-comin' there. I ain't a-

"I was down at Peril with a couple of teams," he said, turning to Juanita, "an' I found a lot of boxes at the station for ye. I lowed ye didn't hardly have any teams handy, so I fetched 'em back to my house. I'll send them over in the morning, but I thought I'd ride over tonight an' tell ye."

She had been wondering how, at a time of mixed roads, she was to have those books, which she would soon need, brought across the ridge. Now he had solved the problem for her. Anse Havey stood leaning against a porch post, his broad shoulders and clear-cut profile etched against the moonlight as he studied the Philadelphia. Suddenly he asked abruptly:

"Have ye found anything that interests ye in the coal an' lumber line?"

Roger Malcolm glanced up and knocked the ash from his pipe against the rail of the porch. He had not suspected that his rambles about the hills with a set of maps and a geologist's hammer had been noted.

But he showed no surprise as he answered with perfect frankness: "Yes and no. I came primarily to see how Miss Holland was progressing with her work. It's true I have thought something of investing in mountain resources, but that lies in the future."

Havey nodded and said quietly: "I hope ye decides to invest elsewhere."

"So far as a casual inspection shows, this country looks pretty good to me," rejoined Malcolm easily. "I may buy here—provided, of course, the price is right."

"This country's mighty pore," said the head of the Haveys slowly. "About all it can raise is a little corn an' a heap of hell, but down underneath the rocks there's wealth."

"Then the man who can unlock the hills and get it out ought to be welcome as a benefactor, ought he not?" inquired the Easterner with a smile.

"He won't be," was the short response.

"Why?"

"The men from outside always aim to get the benefit of that wealth an' then to move us off our mountains, an' there ain't nowhere else on earth a mountain man can live. Developin' seems pretty much like planderin' to us. We generally ask benefactors like that to go away."

"And do they usually go?"

"No; not usually. They always go."

"Do you expect me to believe that, Mr. Havey?" queried Malcolm, still smiling.

"I don't neither ask ye to believe it nor to disbelieve it," was the cool rejoinder. "I'm just tellin' it to ye, that's all."

Malcolm refilled his pipe and offered

the tobacco pouch to Havey. Anse shook his head with a curt "Much obliged," and the visitor said casually: "Well, we needn't have any argument on that score yet, Mr. Havey. My activities, if they eventuate, belong to the future, and when that time comes perhaps we shall be able to agree, after all."

"I reckon we won't hardly agree on no proposition for despoiling my people, Mr. Malcolm."

"I reckon we won't hardly agree on no proposition for despoiling my people, Mr. Malcolm."

"Then we can disagree, when the time comes," remarked the other man with a trace of tartness in his voice.

"Then ye don't aim to develop us just now?"

Malcolm shook his head, the glow of his pipe bowl for a moment lighting up a face upon which lingered an amused smile.

"Not this time. Another time, perhaps."

"All right, then," Havey's voice carried a very masked and courteous but very unmistakable warning. "Whenever ye get good an' ready—we'll argue that."

He bowed to the girl and turned into the path which led down to the gate.

CHAPTER XVII.

It was one of those nights under whose brooding wings vague things and influences are astray and in the making. Dawn had gone back for a few days to her brother's lonely cabin on a hillside to see his house in order and to do his simple mending. Perhaps in her own heart there was an other reason—an unconfessed unwillingness to stay at the bungalow while she must feel so far away from Juanita and see Roger Malcolm seemingly so near.

In her heart vague things were stirring, too, and in another heart. The fact that she had not been allowed to see young Milt McBrier had given him an augmented importance which had kept the boy in her mind despite her denunciations. Once she had met him on the road and he had stopped her to say: "Dawn, do ye know why I don't come over there no more?"

The girl had only nodded and the boy went on:

"Well, some day when ye're at Jeb's cabin I'm a-comin' there. I ain't a-

"I was down at Peril with a couple of teams," he said, turning to Juanita, "an' I found a lot of boxes at the station for ye. I lowed ye didn't hardly have any teams handy, so I fetched 'em back to my house. I'll send them over in the morning, but I thought I'd ride over tonight an' tell ye."

She had been wondering how, at a time of mixed roads, she was to have those books, which she would soon need, brought across the ridge. Now he had solved the problem for her. Anse Havey stood leaning against a porch post, his broad shoulders and clear-cut profile etched against the moonlight as he studied the Philadelphia. Suddenly he asked abruptly:

"Have ye found anything that interests ye in the coal an' lumber line?"

Roger Malcolm glanced up and knocked the ash from his pipe against the rail of the porch. He had not suspected that his rambles about the hills with a set of maps and a geologist's hammer had been noted.

But he showed no surprise as he answered with perfect frankness: "Yes and no. I came primarily to see how Miss Holland was progressing with her work. It's true I have thought something of investing in mountain resources, but that lies in the future."

Havey nodded and said quietly: "I hope ye decides to invest elsewhere."

"So far as a casual inspection shows, this country looks pretty good to me," rejoined Malcolm easily. "I may buy here—provided, of course, the price is right."

"This country's mighty pore," said the head of the Haveys slowly. "About all it can raise is a little corn an' a heap of hell, but down underneath the rocks there's wealth."

"Then the man who can unlock the hills and get it out ought to be welcome as a benefactor, ought he not?" inquired the Easterner with a smile.

"He won't be," was the short response.

"Why?"

"The men from outside always aim to get the benefit of that wealth an' then to move us off our mountains, an' there ain't nowhere else on earth a mountain man can live. Developin' seems pretty much like planderin' to us. We generally ask benefactors like that to go away."

"And do they usually go?"

"No; not usually. They always go."

"Do you expect me to believe that, Mr. Havey?" queried Malcolm, still smiling.

"I don't neither ask ye to believe it nor to disbelieve it," was the cool rejoinder. "I'm just tellin' it to ye, that's all."

Malcolm refilled his pipe and offered

the tobacco pouch to Havey. Anse shook his head with a curt "Much obliged," and the visitor said casually: "Well, we needn't have any argument on that score yet, Mr. Havey. My activities, if they eventuate, belong to the future, and when that time comes perhaps we shall be able to agree, after all."

"I reckon we won't hardly agree on no proposition for despoiling my people, Mr. Malcolm."

"Then we can disagree, when the time comes," remarked the other man with a trace of tartness in his voice.

"Then ye don't aim to develop us just now?"

ELISHA HEALS NAAMAN SYRIAN

(THE STORY).
Happy the government which has at its disposal a commander of skill, experience, and integrity. It may pay his country in a single hour the expense of his support in all the preceding years of peace. Three thousand years ago there was such an officer in the employ of the Syrian Empire. His name signifying "good feeling," he was a prophet of the throne, and very rich. But there are four words which heavily discount the situation, "He was a leper."

A little slave girl acts well her part in this story. She might have felt herself excused, for her sex and servitude, but she carried her religion with her into her new and alien land. She was alert and intelligent. She knew her master's malady and the deadliness of it. Her memory was stored with all the promises of the prophet. She had been working in Samaria. She steadfastly and joyfully believed her master could be included in the charmed circle of Divine healing. She skillfully and at the earliest possible moment dropped the seeds of hope in the heart where it would likely take quick and deepest root. She said to her mistress, "Would God my Lord were with the prophet that is in Samaria, then he would recover him of his leprosy."

The king acted quickly on behalf of the commander. He sent him to the prophet. He did not humiliate, prompted him. Naaman was not yet incapacitated for soldierly duties, and for half a generation the king had successfully defied the whole power of the Syrian Empire through his clear brain and brave heart. But King Benhadad did not rise to a true conception of the prophet's character or function. He seemed to think him a court magician like his own, subject to the order of a king. So the letter was addressed to Jehoram rather than to Elisha. Great treasures were also carried as if a cure could be bought by them. "Sinking times are praying times." When Jehoram was in adversity he resorted to the prophet, but now that he was riding the crest of the wave, he had actually forgotten the very existence of the prophet. He sent the king's letter a pretext for war. He was in abject horror and alarm, and gave the Oriental sign of it. Elisha humbled the king at the same time that he relieved his fears by his message, "Let him come to me, and he shall know that there is a prophet in Israel." There was the dignity of a man who could face a king and not be intimidated. He was grumpy and surly toward Naaman misses the spirit of this incident. The leper brought his old ideas with him to the prophet's very door. He did not believe in the power of the prophet. He wanted not merely to cure him, but to conquer him. Naaman thought Elisha would come to him like a Syrian necromancer, take a ceremonious attitude, repeat some formula of incantation, and wave his hand in solemn gesture. Instead of this, the prophet gave a brand-new receipt for leprosy. All Naaman's money and show went for naught for the meanness Syrian slave could not have been described by the prophet. And the very lesson to be learned. The cure was to be without money or price, but by the power of Jehovah. No man who had come with gifts and pomp according to heathen ideas, to induce the prophet to work the cure by some subtle charm or necromancy, must be emptied of his pride and humbly submit to a ceremony which was patently inoperative of itself. He must accept his cleansing as a gift. He must express his faith in an act of obedience. Naaman's greatest victory was his victory over himself. His pride, his stubbornness, his heathen faith—he slew them all and buried them in the waters of Jordan. He was a new man.

"THE TEACHER'S LANTERN."
"A mighty man, but..." That "but" is a collocation that destroys the harmony. The meanness Syrian slave could not have been described by the prophet. And the very lesson to be learned. The cure was to be without money or price, but by the power of Jehovah. No man who had come with gifts and pomp according to heathen ideas, to induce the prophet to work the cure by some subtle charm or necromancy, must be emptied of his pride and humbly submit to a ceremony which was patently inoperative of itself. He must accept his cleansing as a gift. He must express his faith in an act of obedience. Naaman's greatest victory was his victory over himself. His pride, his stubbornness, his heathen faith—he slew them all and buried them in the waters of Jordan. He was a new man.

The Lord kept Joseph unretaliating. When speaking with the chief butler he said, "I have done nothing that they should put me into the dungeon" (Gen. 40:15). Not a word does he utter concerning that wicked woman, Potiphar's wife, who had designed his ruin. How slow even Christians are to learn that they need do no unkind thing in order to fulfill the plans of God. "He shall bring forth thy righteousness as the light and thy judgment as the noonday."

Hope in God.
Altogether, God was training Joseph to hope in himself alone and to obey him in any event. Doubtless his hopes of deliverance were high when the chief butler left the prison, yet two long years passed before deliverance came. By the grace of God Joseph was kept from growing rebellious, but perished in the way of duty. When God finds a man who will plod on, delighting to do his will under all circumstances, he will quickly set him in a large place and put a scepter in his hand. Joseph was in training for a throne and so are all true followers of Christ.

What a misfortune if the chief butler had remembered Joseph according to his promise! Joseph might have been delivered from the prison and put away a free man out of the land. It scarcely more than this. How his story encourages us to trust and not be afraid!

The Christian's Easy Chair.
An aged Christian woman living in deep poverty was asked how she bore her troubles. She said when they became especially heavy she sat in her easy chair and rocked them away. The visitor looked about for this wonderful chair, but saw no trace of it, until finally the happy saint explained that it was Romans 8:28, "All things work together for good to them that love God."

Did You Know That—
As a rhyme in St. Nicholas points out, the owl is most ungrammatical in saying "To who? to who?" Instead of "to whom? to whom?" But then you can't expect much from an owl, and even less from a boiled owl!

Prisoners of the Lord.

Prisoners would palaces prove if Jesus would dwell with me there. Paul was enabled to write the epistle to the Philippians with its keyword, "Rejoice," from the Roman prison. John Bunyan in his "den" at Bedford saw Immanuel's land and the Delectable mountains. Madam Guyon said the Lord had shut her up in prison like a bird, with nothing to do but sing.

Again, the Lord gave Joseph favor in the sight of the keeper of the prison (Gen. 39:21). The hearts of kings are in the hand of God and his afflicted people may be certain that God is not at a loss when he wishes to relieve them. Stories more fascinating than fiction could be written from the lives of Christians who have been given favor in the sight of the great ones of earth.

The Lord kept Joseph unselfish. Most of us would have felt justified in nursing our troubles, but this man had "a heart at leisure from itself, to soothe and sympathize." One morning Joseph noticed that his fellow prisoners, the butler and baker, looked sad. He immediately inquired the cause and proceeded to help them to the best of his ability. After all, the best way to bear one's burdens is to help bear the burdens of others. Moreover, although Joseph little realized it, his interest in these prisoners marked a crisis in his life; as a result of it he finally came to the throne of Egypt, but he was ready for the crisis only because he was daily caring for the interests of others. How little we know of the crises which every day will bring forth, and how we need to walk habitually so as to please God if we are to meet these crises adequately!

It is evident that the Lord preserved the faith of Joseph. We recall his own dreams when in his father's house, and the assurance they gave him that he would come to a place of elevation over his father and brethren; but here he was in the dungeon and he would have seemed justified had he lost faith in dreams. Yet that this was not the case is evident from his interpretation of the dreams of the butler and baker, and his confidence that God would bring them to pass. Psalm 105:19 (R. V.) tells us that "until the time that his word came to pass, the word of the Lord tried him."

The Lord kept Joseph unretaliating. When speaking with the chief butler he said, "I have done nothing that they should put me into the dungeon" (Gen. 40:15). Not a word does he utter concerning that wicked woman, Potiphar's wife, who had designed his ruin. How slow even Christians are to learn that they need do no unkind thing in order to fulfill the plans of God. "He shall bring forth thy righteousness as the light and thy judgment as the noonday."

RESPONSIBILITY OF OUR SOCIETY FOR THE OTHERS: LOCAL, STATE, AND NATIONAL.
Disagreement is like a bad odor. Unity is a precious perfume. In either case it is not merely a matter of a pleasant sensation. On the contrary, it is a question of marred or increased efficiency. There is no place in which one and one make more than two. The inspirational power of community of interest is practical as well as sentimental. It amounts to augmented serviceableness.

SOUTHERN CHINESE OPPOSE MOVEMENT OF NORTHERN CHINA

Do Not Wish to Make Yuan-Shi-Kai Emperor.—Conditions of This District of Chinese Empire.

(By Associated Press.)
Canton, China, Oct. 15.—Southern China does not take kindly to the movement to make Yuan Shi-Kai, Emperor. Southern China, in fact, seldom takes kindly to any movement emanating from the northern part of the republic. But the restoration of the Empire is a project especially distasteful to the great commercial center of southern China. Most of the wealth of China is centered here and in Hong Kong and Shanghai. The Cantonese have always been extremely independent. They financed and encouraged the two recent revolutions.

Many progressive Cantonese have become wealthy through the development of the mines in the strait Settlements. Others have made great fortunes in Java. And most of the wealthy Chinese in the United States are from the Canton neighborhood. Many of these men are reformers who back their views with money.

Even before the Society for the Preservation of Peace set forth its plan for the restoration of the Empire, there was extreme dissatisfaction with General Lung, the military governor named by President Yuan Shi-Kai to direct affairs in Canton. War conditions made business bad. Then the floods came and intensified the unrest. While inspecting the damage done by the flood, General Lung was injured and a bomb hurled at him by a reformer. A few days later two bombs were found in his house which had been smuggled in by a conspirator.

General Lung has 25,000 troops in the vicinity of Canton and the Yuen.

Shi-Kai government has been able to pay them regularly so far. But in China there is always the danger that an enemy will offer more money and win anyway the military and naval forces. This happened before in Peking, and if the wealthy reformers were to advance sufficient money to finance the opponents of the imperial movement foreigners residing here are apprehensive of the results.

Southern China has been under the influence of Hong Kong so long, and through its extensive trade is so closely in touch with the outside world, that it resents the domination of northern China. The desire for a separate government in southern China is always uppermost in the minds of the reform element. Reformers seek every excuse to advance their views and are seizing upon the movement to restore the Empire as a reason for reviving their efforts to throw off the control of what they regard as the more backward section of the country.

Shanghai, Nanking, Hankow and the other cities along the Yangtze-Kiang are well under control of the Peking government. Warships patrol the Yangtze-Kiang river and it is easily accessible by rail from Peking. The Pearl River is more remote. Canton and other cities along this stream are not accessible by rail from Peking.

Ports along this river are located in a densely settled country where there are many reformers who have in the past seized the forts and defeated naval movements against Canton.

Every precaution is taken now to protect Canton against revolutionists. The baggage of passengers arriving either by rail or water from Hong Kong is carefully searched. Chinese men and women are examined thoroughly to make sure they have no firearms nor bombs upon their persons. Apparently there is no effective leadership for the sentiment against the restoration of the Empire. Sun Yat-sen is thoroughly discredited in Canton and all southern China. The reformers believe he tricked them and pay no attention to the movement against President Yuan Shi-Kai which he is attempting to promote from Tokyo.

No other individual looms big in the anti-government movement up to the present time, but it has the support of many guilds which are constantly opposing the Peking government, regardless of its chief executive.

TAKEN TO ALMSHOUSE BY THE AUTHORITIES

House of Isaiah Barrett Found to be Most Squalid.—Lives Like Hermit Despite Money.

Living in a squalid, one-room frame dwelling in the rear of a brick house on 508 North Bluff street, authorities yesterday found Isaiah Barrett, an aged man, living as a hermit amid squalid surroundings. He is unemployed and vile was the condition of the house and its furnishings and the man himself that the authorities took steps to have Barrett sent to the county almshouse for proper care and attention.

The condition of the one room frame dwelling was squalid. Papers were littered everywhere and refuse scattered in every corner. Food in a putrid condition was found and a small stove having but a faint resemblance of its former state. A small cot was covered with wrinkled garments which were infested with vermin. The clothes of Barrett, which he never took off, it is said, were also verminous.

The astounding part of the case is that Barrett owns at least four houses and lots in Janesville, all producing good revenue from rents, which would be amply sufficient to meet his limited demands to live in a decent fashion. The city visiting nurse some time ago attempted to aid Barrett, but advances to have him "clean up" his residence were met with harsh rebuffs. Nor would he allow others to aid him, for it was his desire to pass his life in a hermit fashion, existing in a most miserably style. His mental status is questionable and one incident shows that Barrett needs attention. Over a month ago he was taken to Chief of Police Champion and complained that some highwayman had stolen a thousand dollars in gold from him. Knowing Barrett to have a miserly nature, the police took a slight belief in the story, but an hour later Barrett returned to the police station and reported he had found the gold hidden in his garden. It is known that Barrett has balances in several Janesville banks.

Yesterday, after Barrett had been taken to the county house, a distant relative, a police officer and Town master Anderson, went to the squalid house and searched thoroughly, fearing that he had hoarded money there and that thieves might search the house during Barrett's absence. A bank certificate for over a hundred dollars was found secreted. This was turned over to the proper authorities.

INSURANCE COMPANIES WILL NOT PAY TAX ON PAST STATE BUSINESS

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)

Madison, Wis., Oct. 15.—Whether the insurance companies which left the state several years ago should be required to pay a tax on their business transacted while absent from the state was answered in the negative in an opinion by Insurance Commissioner M. J. Cleary today. Three companies, the Penn, the Equitable and the Mutual Life have returned to the state and there are upwards of twenty others considering the proposition.

"During the session of the legislature of 1915 the question of subjecting companies formerly licensed in this state and subsequently relicensed to a tax on the premium income collected during the intervening period was considered," says Commissioner Cleary in his ruling. "The proposal for inserting in the insurance laws a provision that the companies should be subjected to this tax was rejected. In my opinion this constitutes evidence that it was not the intention of the legislature to impose this tax upon the companies."

company is the best ever carried by Mr. Bessey.

Some of the plays that will be given during the engagement are: "The Girl in the Taxi," "A House of Mystery," "The End of a Perfect Day," and others of the same class.

The company includes: Nell Paul, who has been Mr. Bessey's leading woman for the past five years; Bertha Ross, Nellie Woods, Janet Carey, Lou Streeter, Arthur Hughes, Bud Stone, Jack Daly, Eddie Collins, Kathryn Brown and Cleo Mayfield.

AT MYERS' THEATRE.

George M. Cohan has gone up one step more and reached the round of permanent fame in the ladder of success, so it is said, in his play, "Seven Keys to Baldpate." It is regarded as his greatest play. It teems with thrills and fun. "Mystery farce" is a new and original classification for melodrama, but the mystery element is strong and keeps one guessing. The plot is perplexing at first—its complete solution does not come until the curtain is rung down in the last act. "Seven Keys to Baldpate" will be the attraction at Myers' theatre Saturday, October 16, matinee and evening.

AT THE MAJESTIC.

Bessie Barriscale in "The Mating" Tonight.

The story of "The Mating" is one that lends itself to the making of a happy, wholly delightful photoplay.

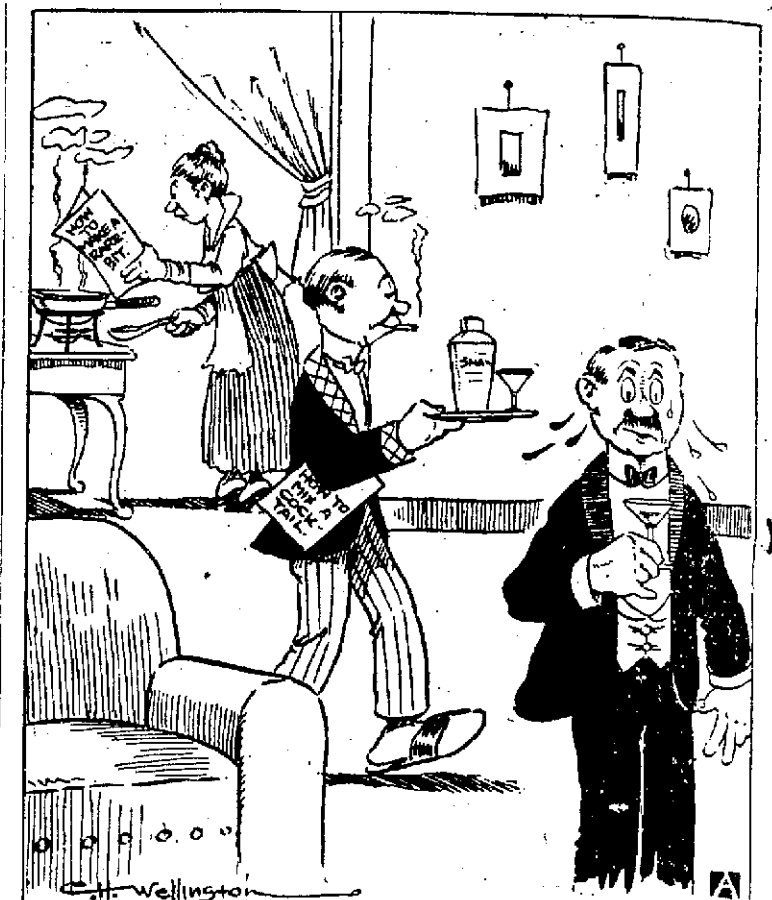

Doris Willard (Miss Barriscale) has looked forward for years to the day of her entry at college, but when it finally comes her poor heart is

The Doctor Will Tell You To Heat Your Floors—

AND if he were to give you a prescription for heating the floors and keeping the house warm and cheerful, it is dollars to doughnuts it would read—"One Garland Base-Burner, operated according to directions." And the directions are so easily followed that even a child could not make a mistake—just common sense.

Stand in front or at the side or in back of a Garland Base-Burner, you will experience the same warm, cheerful glow—like being bathed in the penetrating rays of the noonday sun. You will feel the warmth all over your body in equal degree.

On cold, clammy mornings, when ordinarily the mere thought of getting out of bed makes you shiver, a "Garland" Base-Burner on the job, will keep you from even suspecting the real state of the weather. You will have to go on of doors to learn how miserably cold it really is. With a Garland there is no waste, no over-production—you regulate the heat to suit the conditions. Garlands pay for themselves by the saving they make in the fuel bill.

Over FOUR MILLION housewives prepare their meals and warm their homes with "Garlands," known and considered "The World's Best."

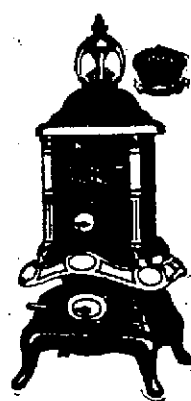

The quality, workmanship and performance of all Garland Stoves and Ranges is absolutely guaranteed. The famous Garland Assurance Policy, issued to you personally, leaves no room for doubt. "Garlands" come in all sizes, designs and patterns to satisfy every heating and cooking requirement, and at prices to suit every purse.

Come in and get acquainted with the artistic designing and wonderful constructional features of "Garlands." Let us explain the labor and money-saving features of the Garland Revolving Fire-Pot. Your "Garland" is ready and waiting for you.

All Have Three Forms.

Arthur B. Doe Describes Heroism and Courage of Wounded 'Tommy'

Arthur B. Doe, of Milwaukee, who gave an interesting address this morning to the golf club of Janesville at one of the club nights on his experiences in the war zone in France and Belgium, relates in The Okean many experiences of the hospitals and battlefields of Europe. Young Doe, who is the son of Gen. Joseph B. Doe, spent six months driving an Oxford ambulance car, at the front. One of his best descriptions, perhaps, is contained in his story of what details a wounded soldier—his hours of suffering in the trenches under fire, his removal to the field hospital, the hours in the general hospital, the journey to the front, and the way back to England. Then come days when he is the ward of sad-faced women who convince him he is a hero; then the recovery, and usually the return to the front.

"Tommy was wounded one night in an advanced position near Hill 60 by a piece of flying shrapnel, which fractured his thigh. Mr. Doe said that he was in the trench and saw a few minutes later another shell came in a part of the trench and nearly added asphyxiation to the already serious inconvenience that Mr. Atkins had undergone. He was so near so he regained consciousness to find two stretcher-bearers endeavoring to excavate him and give him treatment. He was then carried to a first-aid post. Shell kept bursting near the trenches, although the night infantry attack of the enemy had in the interval, been successfully repulsed.

Begin the Journey Home.
"Tommy was slowly lifted on to a stretcher and the weary journey home to England began. Several days and heavy rain for several days, and the R. A. M. C. bearers sank in the mud over their shoulders at every step. The distance that their stage in the journey was about three-fourths of a mile to the single remaining building of the Central farm. They were able to move only 50 or 100 yards at a time without setting down poor suffering Tommy for a few minutes' rest. Tommy's great coat alone, with its accumulations of mud collected during fourteen days in the trenches, weighed eighty pounds. Tommy himself and his equipment made another 230, so that the load, including his rifle and all accoutrements, was about as much as two able-bodied men could have carried comfortably over the smooth floor of a hospital ward. On this third journey of a diabolical kind in mud and wet, a hundred yards seemed an insupportable distance.

Midnight Ambulance Ride.
"During the daylight hours not a single ambulance came to move the victims who have arrived too late to be taken to the hospital. At nightfall the ambulances began to arrive again, feeling their way along the roads through shell-holes and temporary repairs of the most casual kind. Tommy was taken at midnight it was Tommy's turn, and he was lifted into an ambulance. Three other men of his division were in with him. Tommy lay there on the lower stretcher, while blood from the wound of the man above trickled slowly down his face. Tommy's limb was giving him such pain that it was out of the question to endeavor to change his position, and he simply lay there in silence and let the blood drip on. Presently the machine began to move. The road was of unspeakable roughness, and the driver, all too mindful of shells bursting near by, lost no time in covering the distance separating the Central farm from the hospital, away to Ypres. Tommy struggled manfully, but the excruciating agony of an unsteady limb, as he was being tossed about on the roughest roads in hellhound, was too much for him, and presently he cried out in pain. An orderly spoke to him from the back of the car, urging him to stand it manfully, as the car following behind them had just been struck by a shell and put out of action.

First Hospital Experience.
"After a journey which seemed to take several days, but which in reality lasted hardly more than twenty minutes, the ambulance finally came to a stop in Ypres. Tommy was pulled out and set down in another long row of sufferers, upon the floor of a convent school now occupied by the Eight-first Field ambulance. Another long wait ensued, during which, however, some form of nourishment out in its appearance with a more encouraging frequency than had hitherto been the case. During the morning, the operating theater was vacated for a sufficient length of time to permit Tommy to be laid out in its nauseating atmosphere and receive the medical treatment which the surgeons who had been operating continuously day and night for the last four days. After the injured member had been set and a splint (made of a convenient material) had been applied, Tommy was carried to a room next to that in which eight members of the Leinster had been killed and twenty-two wounded by a single shell the day before. This was the restful quarter where Tommy was put to recover from the shock of his wound, his experience in the trenches, and his journey home.

A Grateful Lunch.
"Finally the ambulance came to a halt, and the individual individual Tommy had yet met offered him a cup of Oxo, some bread and cheese, and a cigarette. Since his three months' journey from the front, Tommy had not had a single meal, and he was now so hungry that he ate everything with a relish. He was then given a shower of bread crumbs, a cigarette, burnt matches and cigarette ashes descended upon him from the upper berth. Before Tommy could coordinate his ideas upon the possibility of such halts as these; primarily food providers, and secondarily interruptions in the trials and tribulations of traveling in the luxury of a motor ambulance, they were again on the road to Hazebrouck. About three hours after the commencement of their journey, there ensued another wait, then four or five further inquiries as to where Tommy was injured, then the comfort of silence for a time from the constant reverberation of heavy artillery.

"When this cloudburst of noise and vibration had subsided, Tommy was for the first time confronted with the thought that such a thing as cleanliness existed. He was now sufficiently recovered from shock to make some interest in what was going to become of him ultimately and his first question to nurse or orderly was always, 'Will they take me to England?' Tommy, like all of his kind, was a man of few words, and he spent most of the time lying there, a perfect example of the patience and bravery of the English soldier, making a complaint of the neglect of the orderly, of the absence of anything to occupy his mind, of the quality of the food, of the absence of a mattress or anything softer than a cot, of the stretcher on which to rest his aching limb, but simply wondering whether he would be taken to England, and how long it would be before he would be able to go back to the trenches again. Presently he was picked up and carried out to another motor ambulance.

On the Way to Boulogne.
"At the railway station, being pushed through the windows of French sleeping car was not altogether a comfortable experience for a man with a fractured thigh. However, when he was once settled in his berth, the journey of the train was a period of comparative comfort—a mattress is such a real luxury. For six or eight hours they moved slowly along, stopping most of the time, with an occasional visit from the train surgeon, nurse, or orderly. Cigarettes, chocolate and the comforts of home seemed to be far more plentiful on hospital trains than Tommy had any idea could be. By the time he had been kept awake most of the night by the starting and stopping he was willing, however, to be taken out at Boulogne, to be on one more ambulance ride—this time to a base hospital.

"There was silence. No guns, no aeroplanes, no transport convoys, no rattling ammunition wagons disturbed the quiet. Here there were plenty of things for Tommy to read, plenty of illustrated papers for him to amuse himself with, plenty of opportunity to sleep in peace, to try and recover a little strength, and to forget. After about a week the surgeon announced to him one morning, 'We are sending you home today.' So in the afternoon he was on one more ambulance ride, this time to a base hospital.

"As Tommy's fractured limb began to knit, and have some strength in it, he was given crutches and allowed to hobble back and forth between the schools and the Masonic hall across the High street. Kindly ladies came occasionally and took him out to ride in their machines, parted him gently on the back and said, 'Well done, my boy,' when he had told in two or three sentences the simple story of how and where he had been wounded. And so time dragged along until he was bundled off into the country to a convalescent home. Here, well mentioned ladies, with more real than artificial kindness, took his health, strength and comparative comfort, until he was finally discharged as cured, and given two weeks more of rest, perhaps to return to the front again almost immediately.

HORACE McELROY DIES SUDDENLY THIS MORNING

In politics he was a staunch democrat and affiliated himself at all times with its issues and principles. Mr. McElroy was a member of the board of directors of the Janesville Public Library for many years. Daily he was a visitor to its reading rooms. A coincidence in his death is that he is the fourth member of the library board to die within a year and the second during the week.

At Meadville, Pa., in the year 1873, he was united in marriage to Florence Lee Buchanan. Two children came of this union: Alley Raymond McElroy and Donald Conger McElroy. The latter met death by drowning at the age of eleven years, and the first died in infancy.

Mr. McElroy was a close student of nature and of books. He was a man whose learning made him a most charming companion and a delightful after dinner speaker. He has long held a position of prominence in the city and will be sadly missed by all who have come in contact with him in only a few intervals.

He is survived by the widow, a half brother, John B. McElroy of Chicago, a half sister, Mrs. Lucy Conger Ramey of Berkeley, California. The funeral service will probably be held on Monday afternoon and will be private. It is requested that friends omit flowers.

MOTHERS' MEETING AT "Y" A GREAT SUCCESS

Sixty-Five Women Attend Meeting in Boys' Department—Much Enthusiasm—Plan Other Gatherings.

The mothers' meeting that was held at the Young Men's Christian association yesterday afternoon, was a decided success. About sixty-five women were present, every one full of enthusiasm over the work that they will take up in the boys' department. It was agreed that another meeting would be held Friday, November 15th, and at that gathering a committee would be appointed. This committee will be in connection with the women's auxiliary, but its work will be wholly in the interest of the boys of the association.

A very interesting program was arranged for the meeting yesterday, consisting of a few musical selections and two addresses. Mrs. Cunningham gave an address on "What the Boys Mean to Us." In Janesville Means to the Boys. The boys' secretary, H. J. Center, gave a very interesting talk explaining the work of the boys' department and in what way the mothers can help the work by their cooperation.

LOCAL DELEGATES RETURN FROM STATE CONFERENCE OF ENGLISH LUTHERANS

The Rev. E. O. Hoffmeister has returned from Waterloo, Wis., where the twenty-fifth semi-annual meeting of the English Lutheran Synod of the North-west was held. The new president is the Rev. H. R. Gold of Madison, Wis.

Yesterday was Sunday school day. Miss Clara Olson was the delegate from the local church and read a paper on "Memory and Its Work." Thursday was Women's Mission Society day. Mrs. Bertha Richter, Mrs. A. Malmberg and Mrs. G. Schaller represented the local society. Mrs. A. Malmberg was appointed chairman of the post card committee of Wisconsin. The proceeds of this work help carry on the Italian mission at Philadelphia.

ANNOUNCE THEIR MARRIAGE: GIVEN SURPRISE PARTY

Mr. and Mrs. Harley D. Boswell surprised their friends this week by announcing their marriage, which took place on August the nineteenth at Freeport, Illinois. Mrs. Boswell was Miss Esther Broege of this city. Mr. Boswell was formerly of Canton, Ill., but now makes Janesville his home. He is in the employ of the Rock River Woolen Mills. Mrs. Boswell was a graduate of the Janesville high school and the Janesville business college. They have gone to housekeeping at 302 Center street. Mrs. E. T. Winslow and Miss Iva Wilke planned a surprise party, which was held last evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Boswell, and they were given a kitchen shower. A four course dinner was served at seven o'clock, and the evening was much enjoyed. The guests that were present were Miss McGibben, Miss Josephine McKinley, Miss Isabelle Henney, Miss Lillian Drom, Miss Letta Wilcox, Miss Millie Brinker, Miss Stella Broege, Miss Iva Willey, Mrs. Broege and Mrs. E. T. Winslow. They were all old school friends of Mrs. Boswell.

The first meeting of the Philomathian club will be held Saturday, Oct. 16th, at 2:30 P. M. at the residence of Mrs. C. V. Kerch, 126 Jefferson Ave.

ENTERTAINMENT IS HELD FOR MISS MARGIE GANNON

Misses Gertrude Frieberg and Mae Gannon entertained last evening at the home of Mrs. Maggie Gannon, 539 South Jackson street, in honor of Miss Margie Gannon, who is soon to wed John Flemming. The decorations of the rooms were in autumn style, pumpkins and leaves with strings of orange and black. A mock wedding was the feature of the evening, the parts in which were taken by three guests. A four course dinner was served, and unique place cards aided in making the event most enjoyable. Those present were Misses Hazel Palmer, Ida Shenke, Martha Siebert, Mildred Settle, Marge Boylan, Ella Birmingham, Alice McGovern, Elizabeth Trone, Teckia Kerl, Emma Larson, Elizabeth Doran, Amelia Peshl, Amelia Wolfe, Mae Milford, Carrie Shumaker, Mae Milford, Margie Gannon, Gertrude Greiger, Mae Gannon.
